School of Art Directors.

At the annual meeting of the subscribers to the Indiana School of Art, yesterday afternoon, the reports of the treasurer and secretary were received. They showed the school able to meet all of its obligations. It has an attendance of 12 students. N. A. Hyde, C. E. Hollenbeck and Milton T. Brown, whose terms as directors expired, were re-elected, and Louis H. Gibson was elected to the vacancy caused by the removal from the city of Rev. W. F. Taylor.

At a meeting of the Art Association Mrs. John C. Wright was elected vice president, in the place of Mrs. May Wright Sewell, who has been chosen president of the association. It was decided to keep the art exhibit open on Sunday, from 1 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, free of charge.

DISLIKE TO DIVULGE

The Coffin's Eastern Allies Testify Reluctantly.

The Old Grand of Evidence Still On—Bookkeeper Clark Prodded by the District Attorney.

The evidence in the bank case is still substantially that introduced upon the former trial before the discharge of the jury, with the exception of a few slight innovations.

The exception of yesterday was that in reference to the connection of the Coffins with the Boston and New York branches, and the showing was substantially the same as that made upon the former trial. To show the exact relations existing between them, several letters from the cabinet company to the managers of these branches were read. Charles Clark, bookkeeper and purchaser of the New York branch, testified, as upon the former trial, to the purchase of the property and the subsequent sale of the purchase notes. As upon the former trial, he gave his testimony reluctantly, and was plainly an unwilling witness for the government. His evasive answers finally provoked District Attorney Burke to fling him, in a very sharp manner, why he did not answer the questions propounded by the government with the same readiness with which he responded to the questions of the defense, Judge Baker instructed the witness to answer the questions directly and without evasion.

W. B. Nutting, general manager of the Boston branch, was also on the stand, and testified to the transactions between the Boston house and the cabinet company.

There was a slight variance between his testimony on the former trial and that given yesterday, and he was prodded by the government, Judge Baker instructed the witness to answer the questions directly and without evasion.

On the former trial he testified that he had left the business because he was asked to do things that he could not do. Yesterday he said he left the business because of the failure of the bank and the arrest of the Coffins and Haughey. Thomas L. Pierce, the shipping clerk to whom it is alleged the Boston branch was sold, testified to the transactions regarding the transfer of the property to him so far as he knew anything about it.

THE NEW YORK BRANCH.

Witnesses Explain the Transactions with Cabinet Company.

Upon the convening of the court, yesterday morning, the reading of the records of the cabinet company's mortgages, which had been interrupted by the adjournment the evening before, was concluded, and the pages of the records containing copies of the mortgages were introduced in evidence.

Charles Clark, bookkeeper and purchaser of the New York branch, was the first witness called to the stand. His testimony was, in substance, the same as that given upon the former trial, showing the connection of the Coffins with the New York house. He testified to the purchase of the business by himself in August, 1883, and the execution of his notes, secured by chattel mortgage. He said he had gone to Boston to negotiate the sale of the New York branch to the Somerville Desk Company, in September, 1883.

Mr. Burke—Was F. A. Coffin in New York at that time?

Witness—I think he was there after that.

Mr. Burke—I want to know if he was in New York at that time.

Witness—I don't know.

Mr. Burke—Did you see him at that time and have a conversation with him?

Witness—No, sir.

The witness was then shown various drafts drawn on the New York branch which had been accepted by the company, and said he had never seen them in connection with the business, nor did he know John M. Roberts, who signed some of them as treasurer and some as secretary, in his official capacity. Drafts accepted by the New York branch, after the sale of the business to Clark, were introduced, and the witness said he had never seen any of the drafts. He also testified to the sale of the purchase notes for $100.

The witness was then passed to cross-examination by Mr. Winter. He testified that at the time of the sale of the business to Tufts he was indebted to the cabinet company in the sum of about $3,900, in addition to a small indebtedness to other firms. The purchaser assumed this indebtedness and paid Tufts $675 for the business. He said he asked the advice of F. A. Coffin before opening negotiations with the Somerville Desk Company. He consulted Coffin again during the year in regard to a sale of the property. He said he asked the advice of Coffin because he was trustee in the mortgage given to secure the purchase notes.

He said he had paid about $12,000 of the indebtedness contracted by reason of the purchase. The proceeds of the final sale of the property were turned over to Tufts. Byrd, who held the purchase notes. He said the bill of sale was signed by the cabinet company as well as the transfer of the Office Furniture Company to bind the cabinet company in a release of the indebtedness of the latter to the cabinet, which the purchaser was not to assume.

The witness was then passed to redirect examination by Mr. Winter. He testified that at the time of the sale of the business to Tufts he was indebted to the cabinet company in the sum of about $3,900, in addition to a small indebtedness to other firms. The purchaser assumed this indebtedness and paid Tufts $675 for the business. He said he asked the advice of F. A. Coffin before opening negotiations with the Somerville Desk Company. The purchaser assumed this indebtedness and paid Tufts $675 for the business. He said he asked the advice of F. A. Coffin before opening negotiations with the Somerville Desk Company. He consulted Coffin again during the year in regard to a sale of the property. He said he asked the advice of Coffin because he was trustee in the mortgage given to secure the purchase notes.

He said he had paid about $12,000 of the indebtedness contracted by reason of the purchase. The proceeds of the final sale of the property were turned over to Tufts. Byrd, who held the purchase notes. He said the bill of sale was signed by the cabinet company as well as the transfer of the Office Furniture Company to bind the cabinet company in a release of the indebtedness of the latter to the cabinet, which the purchaser was not to assume.
